Driving Innovation Across States

A grantee of the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation
State Health and Value Strategies (SHVS) assists states in their efforts to transform health and health care by providing targeted technical assistance to state officials and agencies. The program is a grantee of the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, led by staff at Princeton University’s School of Public and International Affairs. The program connects states with experts and peers to undertake health care transformation initiatives. By engaging state officials, the program provides lessons learned, highlights successful strategies, and brings together states with experts in the field. Learn more at www.shvs.org.

Overview

As we enter the upcoming open enrollment period, the environment around health care and health insurance in our country continues to shift. As COVID-19 cases rise across the United States, we continue to see disproportionate impacts on communities of color, record high numbers of unemployment claims, deferment of health care, and a shift in consumer attitudes.

Drilling Down on Target Audiences

Has consumer mindset around health coverage shifted as a result of COVID-19? If deferment of care continues, how does that play into importance of coverage?

How do we segment and communicate with those customers who are brand new to marketplace or Medicaid coverage?

Will we see a bump or drop off in enrollments during OEP and early 2021?
